The President's Message.

A careful reading of Mr. Cleveland's message cannot fail to impress the mind of the impartial with its general excellence. In many of its features even prejudice will not be able to construe it otherwise than very favorably. It is one of the ablest state papers spread before the people for a long time. It is not only a most comprehensive document, but it is as sound and able as it is broad in its grasp. There are few of the views set forth that will not touch a warm chord of sympathy in the American heart. In diction, style and method it is a complete answer to those who, in their own ignorance of the man, sneer at the President as one who filled well the office of Sheriff of his county. The sneer is not only unamERICAN to a lamentable degree, but it is unworthy any man presuming to call himself an American. The very cornerstone of our institutions is laid on the broad, firm ground of the political equality of all men.

But, to proceed with the message. It first deals with the matter of our foreign relations. This is treated in extenso and with the utmost care. The President discusses with the broad, calm air of a real statesman the relations of the United States with many nations. The most important are those with Great Britain on the fisheries; those with China, on the question of restriction, and those with Mexico arising out of the affairs of the crank, Cuting.

In discussing these, and all other foreign relations, while Mr. Cleveland studiously avoided all unbecoming stump style of discussion, and all show of undignified bluster, he holds high aloft and with a firm hand the national flag as a thing worthy of the high respect among the peoples of the globe—a thing not only worthy of respect, but one which must be accorded the very highest measure of respect. He points to American citizenship as a privilege which will guard sacred the possessor of it in all parts of the world. There is no faltering nor cringing in any one of these utterances in the ears of a world assembled to hear what the Great Republic of the New World, through the mouth of her chief magistrate, has to say to kings, tzars and emperors.

The next matters of prime importance taken up are the finances and the tariff. These questions are treated in a manner that certainly must meet with the entire approbation of all the people. The present schedule of taxation is one based on the exigencies and conditions incident to the Civil war, and to the enormous debt which burdened the nation at its close. There are at present no such necessities for the raising of colossal revenues. The debt is as far reduced as it can be at present, and the portion remaining unpaid and unpayable is provided for by the regular operation of the sinking fund. When the next section of the debt is redeemable in 1891 there will be abundance of money to redeem the bonds. When the last batch of bonds mature in 1907 the same provision will meet that demand. As at present arranged there is a surplus of revenue above natural expenses of nearly $100,000,000. This is a heavy burden on the people, which should be removed at the earliest possible opportunity. Yet in all tariff reform, the rights and interests fostered under the present system, some of them which are outgrowths of its worst features, demand careful attention. A conservative tariff revision is the policy of the President.

Agriculture and labor are to a great extent cognate terms. It is a most gratifying thing to find the Chief Executive of the nation turning his mind from what the Republican politicians used to call "practical politics," that is means by which to continue that party in power, to these vital interests of the people—the whole people, without regard to geographical section or social class. The basis of national existence and prosperity are agriculture and labor. These vital questions command a large and wise recognition at the hands of the President.

Another popular strain struck in this masterly paper is the rehabilitation of the Navy and the defenses of the cities of the coast. The present state of both is a disgrace to a great nation, and a standing invitation to every petty state on the globe to insult our flag. Chile has a couple of rams which are so constructed and so armed that they could destroy every city on the Pacific coast, and there are no means provided afloat or ashore to resist their attacks.

Then follow a number of routine matters, such as the postoffice, etc., etc., which are all fully treated. The need of increased postal, judiciary and other service in the growing parts of the West are all urged upon the attention of Congress. The Indian question is taken up with the same comprehensive grasp as the other matters of national import.

The President's attitude on the public lands is a portion of the message which will be read with unalloyed pleasure by all good citizens. It urges the remodeling of the laws so as to preserve all the lands left of the great national domain for the actual use of actual citizens who wish to become actual settlers.

Those who in ignorance think, or in partisan prejudice say, that Cleveland is inimical to the interests, or deaf to the just demands of the soldiers of the Union, will find no confirmation of such views, or pretended views, in the section of this paper where that subject is discussed.

To be thoroughly honest, there are three points on which we can see some discontent and criticism may arise touching the views expressed by the President. Two of these are matters of somewhat local scope—the Chinese and silver. On the first he is rather guarded to meet with a sympathetic response from the Pacific coast. Still he manifests a desire, and we think he means it, to prevent their further introduction to this country. On the silver matter, if his suggestions were fully carried out, so as to reach the old Democratic method of free coinage, it is difficult to see why any trouble should arise on that head.

The third of these points is civil service. Like all sensible men of practical views who have come into close quarters with this matter and seen its every-day workings, there is little doubt that it sits heavily on the executive stomach. But Cleveland finds the law on the statute books and feels in duty bound to enforce it, in the spirit of its makers, if it ever had any spirit in it other than the purpose of retaining the Republican office-holders in the seats they had occupied for a generation. There is only one thoroughly Democratic mode of procedure with this law, and that is to sweep it into the limbo of things lost on earth at as early a moment as can be.

The message will be read all over the Union with much interest and general satisfaction. Its comprehensive and lucid sentences will be deeply pondered. It is a document which not merely the party to which Mr. Cleveland belongs, but of which the whole people may justly feel proud. It is a scholarly, statesmanlike, elegant and profound state paper.

Mr. Lynch's Popularity.
 Some comparisons have been introduced between the vote for Mr. Lynch and some of his esteemed conferees on the ticket, although fully aware of the quality attaching to all comparisons, we are disposed to make one or two for the benefit of those who do not see facts as they are.

Confessingly the place to test a man's popularity is where he lives and is best known. Making such a test the good opinion in which Mr. Lynch's neighbors hold him, is a thing to gratify any man. Here in the city of Los Angeles, he ran side by side with Hon. S. M. White, accounted among the most phenomenally popular men of the town. Another decidedly popular young man on the Democratic ticket was John T. Gaffey. The candidate for Governor is one of the most popular men in the State. Now, taking the vote for these four men, and it stands for the city of Los Angeles: Lynch 2523, Gaffey 2516, White 2508, Bartlett 2325. Gaffey had the endorsement of one or two other nominations and got the benefit of being on their tickets. White, together with all the rest of the county candidates, had the aid of the Labor ticket, a very strong pull. Yet in spite of it all, Lynch was ahead of both. In any political race in this community the man that keeps anywhere near "Steve" White is not hated "by a large majority," nor is he hurt by any malice that seeks his overthrow.

Results of the Election.
 Mr. Workman's majority for the Mayoralty is a very handsome one, being about a round half thousand. We regret very much to be obliged to say that Mr. Cohn is defeated for Tax Collector. He is a most competent man at such matters, and could have rendered excellent service to the city. In this regret there is the consolation to know that the successful Republican who wins the prize is a most estimable gentleman, and a competent person for the duties of the place.

The vote for Treasurer is exceedingly close. By the face of the returns Mr. Ballade seems to fall behind in the sum of about ten votes. There was some irregularity in the polling-place of the Courthouse precinct. The two tallies marked a discrepancy, and it might be well for Mr. Ballade to demand that the votes be recounted under a rigid supervision. The ballots are said to have been scattered and smeared with ink in a row that took place during the progress of the count.

ELSEWHERE in the HERALD to-day will be found a spicy story of how Gen. Vandever held a seat in Congress from 1861 to 1863 by the gross est chicanery. He boasted of this on a recent occasion in an interview printed in a Republican journal of this city, and said he would "worry Lynch as he had worried Byington." He will find

"That the case being altered, That alters the case."

The lower house at the period referred to was almost all Republican. He will not find the Democrats so complacent about his filling a seat which belongs to some one else. The smooth, sanctimonious and hypocritical old General will not be able to "wrong Lynch" to any great extent in the present year of grace when the Democratic House needs every vote that justly belongs to it. In 1861 the Republican House had no such exigent circumstances around it, but the General held the fort by gross wrong. He will not do it again. A man who commits a crime is very likely to try it again, but he often fails in the second attempt, because the public are "on to him."

Fine Corn.

Mr. J. H. Martin, of Los Nietos, exhibited in the HERALD office some specimens of corn, besides a large quantity of English walnuts. The corn consisted of three varieties, a few ears of white Sonora, fourteen inches long, containing seven hundred and eighty-two grains to the ear; also White Flint, thirteen inches long, with seven hundred grains to the ear; Large Yellow, with fourteen inches, with eight hundred grains to the ear. Mr. Martin showed walnuts from eight-year-old trees which measured eight inches around. He received the first premium at the Denver fair; also at the last county fair held in this city. This corn and the nuts were raised on Mr. Martin's own place, one mile north of Fulton Wells, and shows the good quality of the land in this section. To any one who will visit it Mr. Martin will do the honors so that he may see for himself one of the richest spots of Southern California. Plenty of good land and abundance of water and the best of climate.

More Building Movements.

Mr. R. B. Young is erecting a large building on the corner of Sixth and Fort streets for James B. Lankershim. It is leased for three years by M. Robbins for a first-class boarding house. The rooms are in suites, with large grates, wooden mantels, mirrors, etc., for each suite. All the rooms will be highly decorated. The contract for decorating will be one thousand dollars. The house contains twenty suites of rooms. Mr. Young also let the contract for a large addition to Mrs. A. L. Lankershim's building on Spring street, to be used as a show room; the largest of its kind in the city, containing 15,000 square feet, two stories high, with an elevator. Mr. Young has received orders from Mr. James B. Lankershim to prepare plans for twenty two-story cottages, which he intends to sell on the installment plan at cost. A rare chance to secure a nice home.

GEN. VANDEVER

An Old Hand on Fraudulent Seats.

THE "GENERAL'S" CAREER.

He Commands a Brigade in Arkansas and Holds a Seat in the House.

Some time ago one of "General" Vandever's organs in this city published an interview wherein the ancient politician detailed the method by which he held a seat in the Thirty-seventh Congress of the United States against the attempts of Hon. Logrand Byington to unseat him. He there is said to have stated that "he would worry Lynch for a couple of years as he had worried Byington." The publication of this matter was stupidly unfortunate for the post-pleiocene "Gigadler-Brindle."

Mr. Byington happened to visit this city very recently, and to remain here for some days. During his stay he happened to take up a copy of the paper containing the partial account of the story of his effort to get his seat which the "General" occupied by a gross fraud. Later he met a HERALD reporter and after some conversation he referred to the interview. The conversation developing interesting phases, the reporter said:

"Mr. Byington, would you mind giving me the details of the matter?"

Mr. Byington answered: "Surely, I shall be most pleased to do so. In the fall of 1860 Vandever was re-elected a member of the Thirty-seventh Congress from the Second District of the State of Iowa. He went on to Washington in December, as he had been in the Thirty-sixth Congress from the same District. The war broke out, and right upon that Vandever was commissioned a Brigadier-General. The law is specific that such appointments disqualify him to sit in Congress. The District was Republican by 5000 majority or more, and I had run on the Democratic ticket there many times, sure of being beaten, but determined to maintain the autonomy of our party. I ran again to fill the vacancy caused by Vandever's resignation, as we supposed he had resigned or would resign to take command of his Brigade. I got my certificate of election, went on to Washington and presented it. To my surprise I found the 'Brigadier-General' sitting in the seat and enjoying the emoluments of the dual position. He drew his pay in the army and he drew his pay in the House. I at once entered my protest and the matter was referred to the Committee on Elections, belonging to the House. That committee was composed of such men as Dawes, of Massachusetts, Morrill of Maine, Voorhes of Indiana, Spaulding of New York, and other such men of national reputation. The committee was of course, largely Republican. It took five long months to investigate the case. There was the 'General' with his commission in his pocket and his pay too. There was the Congressman with his seat in the House, and his pay with that of the 'General' in the pocket so as to balance him even when he came sailing down Pennsylvania avenue—this Honorable, Congressional Gigadler-Brindle. There was the law plain as print on the statute book forbidding any man to hold such a dual position. In due time, or rather in very undue time, this committee that had held back the report so long by virtue of its Spaulding's glare for Dawes to peek at deigned to report the case back to the House. So manifest was my right that the report was unanimously for my side. I naturally thought I should get my seat. Men like John Jay Crittenden and Roscoe Conkling had made speeches during the debate in the House on my side of the question. But, bless your soul I did not know the 'General' so well then, nor his method of conducting 'practical politics' as I did later. Republicanism was a new thing under the sun, and none of us then knew much of its methods. There this Republican House kept me dancing attendance on it, and all in vain until Congress closed. The vacation ended and I went back. It was the same old story. There sat the 'General' in my seat drawing his pay with religious regularity. Here he paraded the avenues of the city of magnificent distances as a Brigadier-General, drawing the salary, and probably allowance for rations, etc., as a General in the army with the same scrupulous exactitude. I appealed to General Halleck, then commander-in-Chief of the Army to order Vandever to the front to join his brigade. I could make no impression in that direction. I charged him with drawing the double salary. He unblushingly denied it. I knew he lied, and went and got the documents to show he was drawing the two salaries, and that he had lied in denying it. The first session closed and still he sat in my seat. The nation's blood and treasure were being poured upon the earth like so much water. This man fattened on the dual salaries, one of which he was obtaining by holding a fraudulent seat in Congress, and one of which he was doing nothing to earn. Another vacation came and here I was appealing to the deaf partisans of this 'God and morality' Congress for my rights. When in the next December Congress met, and it was the same old story. I went to Stanton, Secretary of War, and an old friend. I told my story and asked him to order the 'General' to the front. Stanton said he would. He did, but the end of June and the middle of July came, and a few hours before the Thirty-seventh Congress came to an end, in sheer mockery, and to make a formal entry in their record they brought in a resolution which passed in words as follows:

"April 11, 1862. The Election Committee reported unanimously a resolution that Wm Vandever has not been entitled to a seat as a member of this house since the 24th of September, 1861." The session ended July 17, 1862.

This case will be found in the Congressional Globe of the second session of the Thirty-seventh Congress, under the style of Byington vs. Vandever, on pages 4, 39, 105, 655, 760, 850, 947, 1822, 1833, 2021, 2022, 2023. The resolution given above is on pages 775 and 1620. Part II of the Globe of that session ends with page 1920; part IV opens with page 2981. Part III I could not find here in the city, or I could have given you more of the details of the case. I thought the man who so long held my seat to which he had no right, through the connivance and fraud of the Republican members of Congress, was dead long ago. Part III I could not find here in the city, or I could have given you more of the details of the case. I thought the man who so long held my seat to which he had no right, through the connivance and fraud of the Republican members of Congress, was dead long ago.

Mr. Byington, would you mind giving me the details of the matter?"

Mr. Byington answered: "Surely, I shall be most pleased to do so. In the fall of 1860 Vandever was re-elected a member of the Thirty-seventh Congress from the Second District of the State of Iowa. He went on to Washington in December, as he had been in the Thirty-sixth Congress from the same District. The war broke out, and right upon that Vandever was commissioned a Brigadier-General. The law is specific that such appointments disqualify him to sit in Congress. The District was Republican by 5000 majority or more, and I had run on the Democratic ticket there many times, sure of being beaten, but determined to maintain the autonomy of our party. I ran again to fill the vacancy caused by Vandever's resignation, as we supposed he had resigned or would resign to take command of his Brigade. I got my certificate of election, went on to Washington and presented it. To my surprise I found the 'Brigadier-General' sitting in the seat and enjoying the emoluments of the dual position. He drew his pay in the army and he drew his pay in the House. I at once entered my protest and the matter was referred to the Committee on Elections, belonging to the House. That committee was composed of such men as Dawes, of Massachusetts, Morrill of Maine, Voorhes of Indiana, Spaulding of New York, and other such men of national reputation. The committee was of course, largely Republican. It took five long months to investigate the case. There was the 'General' with his commission in his pocket and his pay too. war rich. This is the story of the 'galant old soldier,' the pure patriot, who says he will 'worry Lynch as he did Byington.' The 'General' is old, 74 perhaps. He lives in the past and no doubt is ignorant that the Republican house of 1861-2 is not in existence. His awakening will be rude when he comes before a Democratic house to 'worry' a member out of his seat.

SHOE THIEVES CAPTURED.

Clever Arrest of Sneak Thieves by Two Police Officers.

Officer Rogers at half past seven last night was called in by Mrs. C. Neilson, who has a second-hand store of First street, below Los Angeles street, and informed that a young man had left three dozen pairs of children's shoes there for sale, and that he would call in again soon. Rogers, who was in uniform, went to hunt an officer in private clothes, and when he returned with Officer Huston they found the young man counting the footwear. They arrested him and brought him to jail. He gave the name of George Hubbard, and said that his father is a wholesale butcher in San Francisco. He pretended that the shoes had been given him by another person to sell on commission, and that he was to get 25 cents on the dollar. Officer Huston arrested two other young fellows on Arcadia street, on suspicion of being connected with the matter, but Hubbard denied knowing them, though he made a peculiar reassuring sign to one of them when they were confronted. He afterwards admitted to the officers that they were the men. There is no doubt that the three are partners in crime, and responsible for a good many of the sneak thefts lately committed. The two young men arrested on suspicion gave the names of Pat Long and J. Jones, but both names are fictitious. Pat Long had a slingshot, composed of a round rock tied in a silk handkerchief, in his pocket, and he was looked on the additional charge of carrying concealed weapons. Hubbard pretended to have been engaged in the bootlegging business here, and to have worked for Charles Gassen. He is a boy about 18 years of age, and the others are about as old. If this case is well worked up a great many other thefts will undoubtedly be traced to them. Some of the shoes have the strings cut off, showing that they were stolen from the front of stores. The others appear to have been carried off in bulk, and are supposed to have been stolen from the People's Store.

ATTEMPTED INCENDIARISM.

A Nearly Successful Attempt to Burn the Jones Block.

On the gallery at the back of the Jones building, Spring street, in which the HERALD offices and printing rooms are situated, a huge galvanized iron barrel is kept in which waste paper and sweepings are deposited. This barrel yesterday noon stood in its usual place and was then seen filled with paper by the city editor of the HERALD. Some miscreant afterwards removed it into a little empty storeroom at the back of Dr. Clacius' office and put the paper in the barrel afire. As the receptacle leaned against the wooden partition, the flames which were very fierce, communicated to the woodwork, and had it not been for the instant smoke which penetrated into the doctor's office and gave the alarm the fire would soon have been beyond control. Doctor Clacius, by promptly throwing water on the burning stuff managed to extinguish the blaze before an alarm was given.

Board of Education.

The Board of Education met last night under the Presidency of Mr. Earl, all members and the secretary being present.

A number of warrants were ordered drawn and bills of McCarthy, and Calkin, Haas & Boring were disallowed. A communication was received from Prof. Dietz regarding lectures in the French language to teachers and pupils of the High School. The request was granted. A Superintendent Friester was authorized to make arrangements. A petition was received for the reopening of Lemon street school. The Superintendent of Schools was instructed to arrange for the continuance of said school, if practicable. Applications from Misses Lucia Duncan and M. Y. Gowans for positions as teachers were referred to the proper committee and a communication from M. C. Bettinger was referred to the Committee on Janitors. The Committee on Teachers recommended that the Superintendent ascertain what salary could be taken to reduce the time of teacher's meetings and to abolish society meetings among the children of the High School. The recommendation was approved. The teachers of the city schools were allowed one week's vacation during the Christmas holidays, without deduction of salary. Bills for the painting of the Central school building were read as follows: P. H. Mathews, $875; A. Seifke, $788. On motion the bid of the latter was accepted.

Mr. Calkin, of the firm of Calkin, Haas & Boring, appeared before the board, asking that the firm be paid $225 for services of the drafting of the High School plans, rejected during the early part of the meeting. An animated discussion took place in regard to this claim. Dr. Kuriz expressed himself very forcibly against the payment of this amount and the board refused to reconsider their former action in regard to the matter. On motion a warrant for $700 was ordered drawn in favor of Mr. Merrill, contractor for the Central School building, on his contract. Adjourned until Saturday week.

Insane Commitment.

Anna Goesele, a young German woman, married, and the mother of three children, was brought up from Wilmington yesterday and examined by Drs. Wise, Seymour and Cochran, before Judge Brunson, in regard to her mental condition. She was found to be insane and was committed to Napa. Several months ago she was examined here and declared insane, but the commitment was suspended at the request of her husband. She then believed the electric mast, near her residence on San Pedro street, inhabited by demons and spirits, who gave her no peace except when she prayed. Her condition, instead of ameliorating, has steadily become worse, and she was therefore ordered to the insane asylum.

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses were issued yesterday: John Thompson and Martha Bonham, I. H. Pay and A. M. Frazier.

Firemen will find St. Jacobs Oil invaluable after being exposed to severe weather.

THE KILGORE TRIAL.

Slow Work in Securing a Jury that Knows Nothing.

The whole morning session in Judge Cheney's Court was consumed yesterday in securing one more juror in the Kilgore murder trial. At noon there were still three jurymen lacking. Two of these were obtained by 3:30, after a very arduous course of cross-examination, when the special panel was also exhausted. A new venire was then ordered to issue for ten more jurors, returnable this morning at 9 o'clock. The jury, as now constituted, consists of D. W. Head, Geo. H. Bryan, Wm. Wiley, Alfred Workman, W. M. Allison, D. W. Stantley, John R. Beck, and A. M. McCurdy, of the regular term trial jury, and G. D. Witherell, A. Clement and H. S. Seward of the first special venire. The Judge, in adjourning court until morning, especially enjoined upon the jury the necessity of refraining from conversing with any one regarding the case, intimating that if during the trial anything should come to his ears indicating that his instructions in that particular were not fully carried out, he would order the jury to be kept together until the conclusion of the trial. The court room was very much more filled with spectators than on Monday. The father and several of the friends of the prisoner were in court with him. The prisoner himself was as calm as he appeared on all occasions since the murder, when undergoing his preliminary examination.

ABDUCTION OF A GIRL.

She is Caught With Her Seducer and They are Separated.

William Patterson, who is known as a opium fiend and a lover, on Saturday evening induced a young girl of a decent family, whose parents live just below town, to elope with him. The parents of the girl finding that she did not return during the night, on Sunday morning instituted a search for her, which remained unsuccessful. On Monday the matter was placed in the hands of Constable-elect Martin Aguirre, who associated with him Deputy Sheriff Will Hammet, to hunt up the runaways. At about 10 o'clock last night they located their quarry in a house on the little street behind the Pico House. Aguirre was posted at one end of the street and Hammet on the other, so as to prevent Romeo and Juliet from escaping. The officers then advanced and secured the runaways. Miss C. was at once taken home, but Patterson was locked up in the county jail on the charge of abduction until yesterday, when he was released, the parents of the girl refusing to prefer a complaint.

A Dangerous Thoroughfare.

It would seem as if those who have to attend to the condition of the public streets pay no attention to them at all.

That such a street as Main street, in the busiest part of the city, just opposite the Temple Block should be higher by at least one foot one side of the street than the other, and that such difference in the level should be abrupt and precipitous, is not only strange but outrageous. The HERALD called attention to the matter several days ago. On Monday a wagon fell from the higher level to the lower one and sustained considerable damage. Yesterday a similar occurrence took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. In this case, it is true, the driver, a young man in the employ of the Cunningham trunk factory, was drunk, but if the street had been in a proper condition the wagon certainly could not have fallen down suddenly from the rail of the street car track to the asphaltum pavement. If the Superintendent of Streets does not pay attention to the condition of the street soon, suits for damages against the city will be the natural consequences of the neglect.

Baptist News.

Very interesting services were held at the Central Baptist Church, 108 North Main street, Sunday last. After a very able sermon by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Pendleton, the doors of the church were opened (as is customary in this church each Sunday) and three united by letter, and two after baptism, after which the right hand of fellowship was extended to quite a number, in which ceremony the whole church participated. The revival services in this church are deepening in interest. Many are seeking the Lord and quite a number have accepted Jesus as their Savior. Special gospel services for the week were announced as follows: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7:30 P. M. The people are invited. Singing by the Central Choir.

EVERY LADY KNOWS

What a pleasure a comfortable fitting shoe is. Many needlessly sacrifice beauty for the sake of comfort, on account of the inability of the salesman to properly fit the customer arising sometimes from a lack of experience on the salesman's part, and often from an insufficient stock of boots and shoes. No such difficulty exists at

LEWIS BROS.

A lady can purchase a pair of soft, fine, French kid button shoes for $2.75 that will have both comfort and beauty, and for $5 she can buy an imported French kid button shoe, hand turned, elegant, durable and stylish.

EVERY MAN KNOWS

The meaning of corns, bunions, etc., arising from ill-fitting shoes. Business men rush into a store in a hurry and often purchase a shoe too short, owing to a lack of proper knowledge on the salesman's part and their own neglect, and after a few days' wear they make the air sulphurous with the wrath directed at the head of the unfortunate store keeper who sold the shoes. Laboring men need strong and comfortable shoes to sustain their tired forms during long hours of daily toil. Come to

LEWIS BROS.

And we will send you out pleased and happy in the possession of boots and shoes that are durable, stylish and comfortable, and at nominal prices.

EVERY CHILD KNOWS

From little experience, what misery their little feet endure from awkward, clumsy, ill-fitting shoes, distorting the appearance of, and deforming their little feet.

EVERY MOTHER KNOWS

How difficult it is to secure comfortable, durable shoes for children. How many exclaim: "Oh, dear; when and where will I find something that will last a little while?" To all of the above we can only say, if you will come to

LEWIS BROS.

And examine their immense and varied stock of boots and shoes, be fitted by experienced and careful salesmen, you will leave their establishment pleased and happy in the possession of a pair of boots or shoes that will not hurt, that are stylish, durable and comfortable, and at less price than you pay for clumsy, miserable looking goods at other stores.
